Art Animals Oil

This is an oil painting of a dalmation dog. I wanted the keep the background plain, in order for the main focus to be the dog and the natural black and white colours to be emphasised.

We started Tellart in 1999. Our philosophy then was the same as our philosophy now:

We're human beings. We think design shapes human experience. We think of design as a way to address human needs.

We're designers - by temperament, by training, by experience. We think of design as a sensibility, a practice, a process.

We're professionals. We think the best design is a response to constraints - social, political, cultural, financial. We welcome them, we understand them, we work efficiently within them. We think of design as a service.

We're teachers and scholars. We lead research studios at one of the nation's leading design schools - experience that allows us to experiment, to explore, to study the future of our discipline. We think of design as an evolving set of possibilities.

If design serves a purpose, clarifies expression, functions cleanly, and makes sense of the material world - then it is beautiful. We think design is a human art.

Tellart is a design firm specializing in Web, Mobile, and Embedded product and service development. Tellart works closely with product manufacturers, retailers, architects, and inventors to research, conceptualize, design, engineer, and prototype new products, projects, and mixed reality experiences.

Over a decade we have developed a method of working closely with clients during the innovation process. One of our core strengths is our ability to facilitate research, understanding, decision making, and consensus building through the use of participatory design principles and visual diagrams. We have built a platform of hardware and software

Our unique team of industrial and graphic designers, hardware and software engineers are able to take interactive product and experience design ideas from research to manufacture. Our interfaces go beyond the keyboard, mouse, and screen. They sense motion, light, sound, GPS and RFID, and all kinds of stimuli; they communicate back to participants through all of the human senses.

We are sometimes hired to drive a project from the outside, and sometimes hired to work collaboratively with in-house teams to develop concepts and prototypes internally. We also offer partnerships and workshops to corporations and schools wishing to use physical computing materials and methods to

Tellart works closely with product manufacturers, retailers, architects, and inventors to research, conceptualize, design, engineer, and prototype new products, projects, and mixed reality experiences.

TRASHY

HOW IT WORKS

Trashy's lid, rather than swinging up, slides all the way to the side, which leaves the inside exposed for throwing the recyclable (blue) and compostables (green) in. This sliding action allows the top surface to be fully used as a table top, with a 90 lb capacity.

The landfill trash goes into a drawer bin which pulls out towards the user. There is a lower drawer for bag storage, and space in the top for hazardous waste like batteries. The compost bin can be slipped out for countertop or in-sink use.

We work at the intersection of the human and digital worlds; we shape the new world between them. We design and build content, interfaces, and devices in {and across} a range of platforms—Web, mobile, and embedded.

With each project, we think broadly, conceptually, and imaginatively about a range of concerns—cognitive and perceptual, social and cultural, technological and concrete. We help people make sense of their digital environment; we help technology respond to human need.
